DIVIDED

In Their Opinions Regarding Sunday Services at

OHIO STATE FAIR.

Noted Divines in Addresses and Interviews For and Against the State Agricultural Board's New Policy.

The question of the opening of the state fair, last Sabbath, has been discussed strongly through the pulpit and press. Below we give an extract of Dr. E. L. Rexford's sermon at the fair grounds on that day, and also some statements as to the opinions of Cincinnati ministers on the question.

"The board of agriculture in considering the question of a two weeks fair found itself confronted with the more embarrassing question of the Sabbath that would intervene. What should be done on that day was the perplexing problem. The members anticipated that there would be a considerable party in the state that would strongly oppose the opening of the gates on that day, and in this forecast it does not seem that they were disappointed. On the other hand they believe that a much larger party would be in favor of such a policy, and in this belief they were right. They had regard also for that large number of people in Ohio who could not avail themselves of any other day for such inspection without suffering the loss of wages—a loss which many could not afford. The arguments for and against his decision have been given to the people through the pulpit and press. I may be permitted to say, however, that I think the board has acted wisely and patriotically and even religiously in the premises. It has been urged against the opening of the gates on that day that it will establish a precedent which other boards of agriculture will seek to follow. I sincerely hope so. I hope that the benefits of this day and the influence of this service may be such as to make the policy of this present board an example to be repeated by the authorities for many a year to come. If on the contrary, there shall be discovered some evil influence stealing into this service or growing out of it—a result which seems to me incredible. There is no company of men in the state who will be more ready to abandon this day's policy than those who have inaugurated it."

Rev Dr Lasher says: "The Ohio State Fair, at Columbus, was opened last Sabbath, notwithstanding the protest and the importunity of the Christian people of the state. It is said that 10,000 people were on the ground and religious services were held at the grand stand, when two men recognized as 'ministers of the Gospel' took part. One was the pastor of the Universalist Church, Rev E. L. Rexford, the other Rev Edward Jones, pastor of the Episcopal Church. An ex-reverend, formerly a Methodist, was fitly the third participant. The preacher was the Universalist, and it offered him a chance to vent his spleen against the evangelical ministers who refused to take part in the profanation of the day. He was especially hard on President Thompson, of the State University, who at first thought he would participate in the services, but after thinking of it refused. The preacher made a strenuous plea for liberty of conscience, and thought that 'much of the labor trouble which results in strikes would occur if the women were better cooks and cleaner housekeepers.' There seems to be something quite fitting in the religious conclusion of the men who had part in the desecration of the Lord's Day, and it is evident that the opening of the fair was opposed by the religious sentiment of the people of the state."

Dr. F. C. Monfort, editor of the Herald and Presbyterian, said: "I heartily endorse the resolutions passed by the Presbyterian ministers. I do not think it is necessary or right to impose upon or question the motive of those ministers who held this religious meeting. They can be as honest as other men."

Dr. Robinson, of the Trinity M. E. Church, said: "The resolutions passed by the Presbyterian ministers are not too strong. The Cincinnati Methodist Conference, which convenes this week at Dayton, will adopt similar resolutions. I do not impugn the motives of the ministers who conducted the meeting on the state grounds. A Universalist could hardly have acted or spoken otherwise."

Rev Dr Rexford, who preached the sermon on religious liberty is one of the best known and most esteemed divines of his denomination.

A Notable Novel.

The well known reputation of Greene County in literary effort is ably sustained by W. A. Paxson in his new novel, 'A Buckeye Baron.' This scene of the hero's boyhood life is a farm in the neighborhood of Jamestown, from which he makes excursions to Clifton, Yellow Springs and the Little Miami, with its Lover's Leap, Fairy Pool and other features that are gathering the moss of romance as the years roll by. The young man's father, an old skindint of a type that is rapidly passing away, makes his life a burden, which is aggravated by the refusal of a neighboring girl's father to consider his suit until he becomes a baron. What others would consider a point-blank refusal becomes an incentive to our hero, who in quest of the title driven Ulysses like for many years through Europe and Africa. After a series of astonishing adventures he gains the coveted title and great wealth, when he hears of his sweetheart's marriage. A season of despondency is followed by a longing to return to the scene of his childhood which he accordingly does, to find the report of the marriage true, although to another man. The demon of drink, for once serving a useful purpose, soon carries off the husband, thus allowing the marriage of the two affinities—quod erat demonstrandum. Although the love-story is well and consistently drawn, the reader cannot get very far into the book without discovering that the story is being made the vehicle for several featural character studies, which will appeal to any whose wells of human sympathy are not dried up.

The book is a pioneer in a new style of fictional evolution. The old stage novel was followed by the one having a nation as a stage. Then came the State novel, now the township claims the distinction. The intensity increases as the extension decreases. But to say that on this account the book will not interest those unacquainted with the kind of people and the locality, would be as untrue as to say that they do not care to look at pictures of home scenery. Those who recognize old acquaintances in the book will treat it as a link with the past and treasure it accordingly, while those unacquainted with its personages and details will receive added confirmation that human nature is the same the world over.

STOCKMEN

Of Cedarville in the Front at State Fair.

$1500 IN PREMIUMS

Will Be Brought Away by Our Local Stock Breeders.—The fight was not an easy one.

Cedarville was certainly at the front at the State Fair held at Columbus during the past two weeks. It has been said that it was always Cedarville against the world, and it must be so, for the way our stockmen came out with premiums is certain proof that we are in a position to furnish the world with the finest cattle, hogs and sheep.

In looking over the various herds and noting the address one might think the fair was held for Cedarville stockmen. To a certain extent this is the case, for it is worth for her representatives the fair board would have to decide that the fair would not be a success. And thus it goes and we hope it will continue, not only with Ohio, but other states as well.

The Herald, in behalf of the citizens of Cedarville and Cedarville township, wish to extend our congratulations to you who have been so successful in keeping up the standard of Greene county and particularly Cedarville township. We have not yet received a verified report of their success, but the report is close enough to demonstrate to the people of Ohio that we are still in the lead in every respect.

Cedarville township will bring away something like $1500 from this fair, and is divided about as follows: D. Bradfute & Son, $500; Andrew Bros., $325; J. R. Orr, $325; J. S. Brown, $100. R. C. Watt has already in the neighborhood of $125 on his Duroc Jersey hogs, and expects with the competition he has on sheep to take another hundred. We are informed that Robert Williamson, of Xenia was head man in the Merino sheep.

The victorious stockmen are not able to reply to their defeated competitors that they "were easy" as the fight was a hard one, the premiums being given exclusively on the merits of the stock. There were something like three herds of Red Polled cattle, four of Polled Jersey and six of Abernethys. O. E. Bradfute reports that they had the strongest competition they ever had outside of Illinois. To-day will be the day for the sweepstakes, and the fight promises to be a warm one, and will be closely watched by all interested in this line.

Lucky Runaway.

Wednesday evening while Jasen McMillan waiting in front of Crouse's meat store for some ice to be put in his buggy, the horse became frightened and ran up Main street to the Orr corner at break-neck speed, and in making the turn the animal came in contact with one of the large shade trees in front of the Stewart property. This seemed to have subdued the steed, as it was easily captured. The most remarkable thing about it, all that there was not a scratch or brake.

THEY FORGET THE WILSON BILL.

But the People Want No Return to Business Protection and Will Not Permit It.

Do they mean it, or do they not? Was it put into their party platform for 1901 by the Ohio Democrats for real business, or for buncombe?

These questions are vital to the pending campaign. They can not be set aside, or put into the background by any Democratic clamor over other matters. They relate, and rightfully, to that plank of the Democratic platform in Ohio for the present year, which not only declares for "the abolition of the so-called protective system," but also insists upon "the substitution in its place of the traditional Democratic policy of a tariff for revenue." There are other ways wrapped around these to conceal the nakedness and ugliness of the same old Democratic free trade doctrine, but they can not hide it. The evil is there, and it is in the campaign.

It is not in the campaign, then the Democrats of Ohio stand self-confessed as frauds, seeking to deceive the people by putting forward issues in which they have no faith themselves. If free trade is not to be fought over once more in Ohio, why did the Democrats bring it out to the front again from the partial obscurity in which they put it during the years in which first free silver, and then opposition to the expansion of the territory of the United States were made "paramount?" Repudiation in all its forms has been made a party principle by the Ohio Democracy in past years, and that party has been driven from one guise of it to another, until at last even the most sacred shibboleth of free silver has been dropped in silence, but through it all, and all the time "the traditional Democratic policy of a tariff for revenue" has been clinging to. Always, and everywhere, Democratic power meant Democratic free trade. No matter what bait for gudgeons has been used, when it caught them they were thrown into the free trade net, and used to destroy "the protective system."

The very word "traditional," used by the Democrats in their declaration of policy, describes and fixes it most completely. From it there is no release or escape, and their return to it in full force this year ought to warn every worker and wage-earner of the risk he runs in adding to put such a party back into power.

Does any man need any demonstration of the dangers to him and his earnings that the "traditional Democratic policy of a tariff for revenue" involves? Who has forgotten 1893 and the years after it so soon? Did not the Democrats defeat of Harrison's re-election in 1892, stop the prosperity of that year under "the so-called protective system," supported, enacted and enforced by the Republican party, and sound the signal to stop it, and reverse it and throw it down? Cleveland's election checked all progress and he was president barely two months when the panic of 1893 swept destruction over the land. Who can recall those recent years without terror at the thought? Who would vote to-day to bring back those years? And yet the Ohio Democrats make the very demands in their present platform, that they did in 1892, and all over the country there is a revival within that party of the supremacy of its free trade element, of the prominence of that "traditional Democratic policy" Will Ohio give its vote to increase such peril to our own people?

The Ohio, he it remembered, was given the honor in an election for governor of first turning the tide of Democratic distress towards Republican prosperity. In the darkest days of '92, when the Democratic panic was at its height, the Republicans of this state nominated William McKinley for governor, and his election that year by 80,998 plurality was the signal that the country had already repudiated "the traditional Democratic policy," and was the first streak of daylight in the clouds and darkness that hung over the land.

Farmers would be the first to feel any reduction of duties upon articles that are now exported, because farm products are numerous upon the list. Yet it is "the traditional Democratic policy."

Because the farmers of the United States furnished 24,000,000 bushels of barley for export last year, shall the duty upon this product be taken off as the Democrats demand, until we get back to the place where barley becomes an import instead of an export, as it was under the Democratic tariff that brought in 11,000,000 bushels of barley from Canada in a single year?

Amaziah Hamilton, colored, who resides west of town, died of smallpox Friday morning about two o'clock. It is thought that the disease was brought from Richmond by a visitor to the home of the deceased. He had been sick for some time, and was receiving medical attention from a travelling doctor from Yellow Springs, who contended that he had chickenpox. Sec. Probet, of the state board of health, was sent for and he called it a genuine case of smallpox, and ordered a strict quarantine. A daughter is also suffering with the same disease but in a milder form. It is said that one member of the family was in Wilberforce and Xenia Thursday. The authorities here should see that those who are subject to this disease have everything as pure as possible.

Talked of the Importance of Republican Policies.

Need of Pushing Reciprocity to the Front—Open the Ways and Broaden the Channels of Our National Trade.

Governor Shaw, of Iowa, in his address at Lincoln to the Nebraska League of Republican Clubs at the largest meeting in its history, made these strong and true statements that involve vital issues in the Ohio campaign now commencing:

"By the application of the Republican policies we have won mercantile independence, and are well started toward the conquest of the commercial world. The same purpose must actuate Republicans in the future. American labor must have employment, and to that end American capital must find avenues of profitable investment. But American markets are no longer sufficient. The time has come when we must secure new outlets, new trade channels."

"In 60 years our agricultural products have multiplied by four, while our manufactures have multiplied by eleven. We are consuming an ever increasing proportion of the products of our farms and exporting an ever increasing proportion of the products of our factories. The demand for our markets now is but a whisper compared to the cry of coming years. The best that can be done for our industrial interests is to open the ways and broaden the channels of trade. How can this be done? I answer, in many ways, and in all ways. Reclaim the arid portions of the states bordering on the Rocky Mountains and if no more feasible plan be presented, charge the expense to the lands benefited; encourage a merchant marine, construct an isthmian canal, continue to improve our canal service, and above all, secure convention rights in the ports of Europe and an open door through Asia."

"The principle of reciprocity must be put in operation, or it will never again require the declaration of a party platform to convince the American people that the whole theory of reciprocity, when it comes to actual practice, is a failure. The future of reciprocity may not depend upon the ratification of any particular treaty, but reciprocity as a policy, if not already, will soon be a trial, and on trial for its life. It must be either applied or abandoned."

"I do not say that commercialism and statesmanship are synonymous terms, but I say that the protection of our own markets and the acquisition of others is commercialism, then commercialism is by no means an unimportant element in American statesmanship."

The federal department of agriculture is preparing to issue at an early day a bulletin concerning the wages of our farm laborers in the United States from 1864 to 1899. The annual salary of 1899 is held responsible for the depression of that year, and it is stated that in 1899 the highest anti-slavery rates had not been regained. From all accounts, however, 1900 and 1901 will show great gains, that will be maintained, unless "the traditional Democratic policy of a tariff for revenue," demanded by their Ohio platform of 1901, should start back to power under some false pretense.

Will farmers or farm laborers permit themselves to be deceived into bringing back bad times? No matter what humbug may be set up to delude the voters, "the traditional Democratic policy" will be the real thing. It is the one idea that the Democratic party has, along to unchangingly. Other theories have been taken up, and a great hurrah made over them for a campaign or two, just to capture votes, and then dropped out of sight, but this opposition to protection that brings prosperity has been persistent. It has indeed been "the traditional Democratic policy." Vote it down again.

Governor Shaw, of Iowa, deserves credit for those two strong sentences, uttered from many by him, because they fit into the Ohio campaign.

"By the application of Republican policies, we have won mercantile independence, and are well started toward the conquest of the commercial world."

"In 60 years our agricultural products have multiplied by four, while our manufactures have multiplied by eleven."

And now all of this prosperity is put in peril by the Ohio Democratic demand for "the traditional Democratic policy of a tariff for revenue."

STANDS IN THE WAY.

No radical reform of Ohio's taxation system can ever be completed under the state constitution as it has stood for 50 years. Only by amending that so that the state can be segregated from the counties and municipalities in its raising of revenues, can any reform get a fair start. The legislature can act, if the grip upon its powers by the constitution, which now ties the general assembly hand and foot, can be released. That brings the power back to the people or as close to them as is possible. The Republicans have repeatedly tried to bring this about. The Democrats have done nothing. Will that party keep up its do-nothing policy?

RECIPROCITY.

The Democrats knocked reciprocity out of the laws, where it was put by the Republicans, and never has any Democratic congress or president done anything to make that method for American trade extension effective in the least. How false, then, is any friendship for reciprocity that the Democrats may profess, now that the day of its assured success is at hand. Entrust it only to the Republican party, by which it was first advocated and enacted. Risk reciprocity only with its original advocates and unfailing friends, not with the Democracy who repealed it when it was in the state.

Quiet, faithful, efficient, economical, without any fuss about things, but with every duty done every time, Governor Nash's administration has been like the man himself. As his friends knew him, his state now knows him as equal to every occasion, sure to do the right thing in the right way at the right time. Ohio will be true to herself, by being true to such a governor.

The Foraker act for free trade with Porto Rico as soon as that island should have the local revenues to pay its local expenses, is now in full force under President McKinley's proclamation, just as congress promised and directed. That is the Republican style exactly; make sure of every step and take it in due time exactly as agreed.

When he wrote the reciprocity sections of his tariff law, McKinley proved himself the true friend of that method for trade expansion. When the Democrats repealed that enactment, they proved themselves its enemy. Best keep in power the people proved by their acts to be the friends of reciprocity.

Let no Republican forget that the Democratic platform for Ohio in this year of grace demands "the traditional Democratic policy of a tariff for revenue." Let no wage earner or farmer forget it, no matter what party has claimed him heretofore.

"Like causes always produce like effects," and invariably "the Democratic policy of a tariff for revenue" has smashed business prosperity. Every Kilbourne ballot is a vote to endorse this wrecking system.

Reciprocity is a Republican policy and has been from the first. Trust none but the Republican party as its first and best friends for its proper enactment.

LIST YOUR PRODUCTS.

Just let the Ohio farmers make the list of their own products that would go on the free list, under "the traditional Democratic policy" demanded by the Ohio Democrats this year, and the claim that every exported article must have the tariff removed that protects it. Cattle and meats of all kinds, barley, fruits and all vegetables, cheese, butter and eggs, all come under this head. The removal of the duties upon them with the consequent stimulus to importations would reduce the level of prices paid to the producers of the United States, and the mischief wrought to the farmers of Ohio, would be both great and continuous.

CUTS AND BRUISES QUICKLY HEALED.

Chamberlain's Pain Balm applied to a cut, bruise, burn, scald or like injury will instantly allay the pain and will heal the parts in less time than any other treatment. Unless the injury is very severe it will not leave a scar. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism, sprains, swellings and lameness. For sale by C. M. Ridgway.

Reciprocity has been a Republican principle since Blaine began its agitation, and McKinley made it part of his famous tariff law. The Democrats hastened to repeal that measure, and to root out reciprocity in particular from the statutes. Only by Republican continuance in power can reciprocity be made effective.

EQUALITY IN TAXATION

That Is What the Republican Party Demands.

DEMOCRATS TAKE THE OPPOSITE.

They Demand Excessive Taxation of Corporations, Instead of Having Them Pay into the Treasury Their Fair and Proper Share of the Tax Burden.

If the Democrats expect to impeach or impair the record of the Republican party on the subject of taxation of corporate franchises, they will be sadly disappointed. The position of the Republican party on this subject is impregnable. It has a distinct and admirable record in respect to taxation, and by that record it will stand firm and undismayed. There will be no dodging or shifting, or evasion of the issue. The facts show that the only rational and equitable tax laws of the state have been written on the statute book by the Republican party. The returns in the office of the Auditor of state show that a large and growing revenue has been assessed and collected from corporations, as a result of laws enacted by a Republican administration. But we shall go farther. We shall show, by the history and development of the tax laws of the state, and by the decisions of the supreme court in respect thereto, that the Republican party has originated and enforced just and equitable laws for the taxation of corporate franchises—despite very serious legal objections—and that the party has originated the system of taxation of corporate franchises just as far as the Ohio constitution will permit. Before further legislation on this subject can be enacted, the state constitution must be amended to give the legislature the necessary power. Such is the status of the question, as will be shown by a sufficient review of the history of the legislation in respect to taxation, and the review of such legislation by the highest judicial tribunal of the state.

The Ohio Republican platform of 1891 contains this provision:

"We favor such a revision of the tax laws of the state as will require all classes of property to bear their equal and just share of taxation, and we recommend the creation of such machinery for fixing and equalizing valuations as will be adequate in all times to correct error and take notice of changes in value."

The position of the party is thus clearly and unequivocally stated. The party not only recognizes the necessity for a revision of the tax laws of the state, but it demands the creation of such machinery for fixing and equalizing valuations as will be adequate in all times to correct error and take notice of changes in value."

It is the purpose of the party, therefore, not to enact any radical or unjust legislation—thus creating work for the supreme court to undo, aimed at any one class of property—but, as clearly stated in the platform, to enact appropriate legislation which will compel "all classes of property to bear their equal and just share of taxation." The purpose of the party is to secure uniform and just legislation, under which a uniform rule of assessment will be applied to all species of property, and to permit other kinds to escape its just share of the public burdens. At the same time the party purposes to create a tribunal as will afford to all classes of property owners a chance to review the action of the assessors, and to correct errors, and make a proper estimate of changes in values. The party simply demands a just, equitable, and business-like system of taxation, and a fair and equitable administration of such system.

The Democratic platform, on the other hand, declares in plain terms, its hostility to railway and other corporations, and purposes to enact such legislation as will bring all such corporations under some new and different form of taxation from that which will be applied to other species of property. This is a blow aimed directly at the corporations, and shows the true spirit of the Democratic platform. The party does not propose a fair and equitable distribution of the public burdens, and declares that the corporations shall be subjected to new and onerous burdens—the precise character of which is not clearly defined. The Ohio Democratic platform declares:

"Steam and electric railroads and other corporations possessing public franchises shall be assessed in the same proportion to their sales value as are farms and city real estate."

Now the Democrats propose a remedy which has been attempted before, but which has been negated by the supreme court, as repugnant to the constitution. The constitution is the paramount law of the state, and the supreme court will not permit the enforcement of any law which may be in hostility to it. Therefore, any further attempts to tax the franchises of corporations, without a further grant of constitutional authority, will be a sheer waste of time—a futile and senseless undertaking. If corporate franchises are to be taxed, the people must consent to an amendment to the constitution giving to the legislature authority to enact a statute to that effect. Until such action is taken, the taxation of corporate franchises cannot be effected.

The Republican platform further declares:

"During the last ten years the general assembly has increased the revenues of the state by forms of taxation other than by levies upon real and personal property. We favor further legislation in this direction, to the end that the burden of taxation upon property may be lessened, and we denounce any scheme which aims to cast the entire burden of taxation upon real estate."

Under this clause of its platform, the party declares in favor of a proper equalization of taxes upon all classes of property, and denounces all attempts to effect an indiscriminate taxation of any one form of property, in order that another form may escape its just share of the public burdens. Summed up, then, the demand of the party is for a general revision of the tax laws, and an equal and just distribution of the public burdens upon all classes of property alike, without any discrimination in favor of one class of property, or attempts to saddle upon another class more than a fair and just proportion of taxation. The party demands justice and equality in this, as in all other forms of legislation. In attempting a revision of the tax laws of the state, the Republican party will, if enacted with that duty, frame a system of taxation based upon an inquiry in respect to the character and true values of all kinds of property real or personal, and of the property and franchises of corporations, to the end that justice may be administered to all classes of property owners alike. No efforts will be made to impose a special or unjust scheme of taxation upon corporations; such organizations will be required to bear their just and fair proportion of the public burdens, regardless of the kind or character of their property or business.

The Republican party relies upon its experience, capacity and judgment in the enactment and execution of just and equitable tax laws, and invites the confidence of the people in this respect. The people do not dare entrust the power to effect a revision of the tax laws of the state to the Democratic party, lest that party abuse its powers, and accomplish more injury to the state by driving out valuable enterprises than would be gained by the imposition of additional taxes. Entrusted with the control of the machinery for that purpose, the Democrats could be depended upon to use it for the enactment of some radical or freak legislation which would work a lasting injury to the state, and to its exalted reputation—which is justly high in the commercial world.

PEACE IN THE ISLANDS.

Peace in the Philippines has not pleased the party that opposed and hindered every endeavor to enforce the authority of the United States, and the Ohio Democratic platform of 1901 echoes all the old stuff, so long since exploded by actual results. But there are thousands of Ohio Democrats who are for the flag, first and last and all the time, and these patriots are not to be deluded by the deception of the party leaders. Those attempts at revolt disgraced those true Americans last year, and added to the majority for McKinley in McKinley's state, and this year will again add to the majority for Governor George K. Nash.

CUBA ADVANCING.

Cuba is steadily advancing to complete freedom, and is finding out that the United States government must under Republican rule keep its promises. Porto Rico has had complete proof of this, and Cuba has had ample evidence of it in every step taken up to date. Will the people of Ohio repudiate in any way the Ohio President, who has so steadfastly safeguarded every interest of the United States, while giving the islanders in the fullness of time every agreement?

Had the Ohio Democrats really meant their pretensions of friendship for tax reforms in this state, they would have done something in their days of political power. Let them name one enactment made by their party that is helping to lessen the tax burdens of the people?

Every enactment that has lightened the load of the people of Ohio on state tax duplicates, has been enacted by Republicans, and against the Democratic opposition. This one fact answers all "the sounding brass" on the subject of the Ohio Democratic platform of 1901.

"The traditional Democratic policy of a tariff for revenue" is their own platform phrase, not ours.
